General Information:
1. For all questions, include the following general programming instructions:
   - Do not allow key-over for responses on first reading of question or answers, unless question is second or subsequent item in a sequence of questions with the same answer set as the previous item.
   - Include following instruction after reading answers for the first time: "To repeat the question, press the star key."
   - Allow 3 seconds for a response; then automatically repeat the response instructions
   - If question is being repeated, restate the question and then state the answers and response numbers immediately (no need to state all of the answers first)
   - If question is being repeated, allow key-over for responses
   - If question is being repeated for any reason, after reading answers, add the following instruction: "If you'd like to skip this question, press the hash sign."
   - After question is restated three times (for any reason), skip to the next question
   - Allow leading zeros on numeric responses. For example, on questions asking for the month of an event, allow "1" or "01" as the same valid response for "January".
2. For categorical responses, use following rule for range checks:
   - If a response is out-of-range, repeat just the answers and response numbers, allowing key-over.
3. For numeric answers with logical range checks (e.g., a four-digit year when reporting a date), use following rule for range checks:
   - If response is out-of-range, repeat the response instructions allowing key-over.
4. For numeric answers with non-logical range checks (e.g., see J4, J9, J10, and J18), which require the respondent to press the hash key following their numeric entry, include the following programming instruction:
   - If numeric response is out-of-range, provide the following instruction: "Please enter a number between [lower] and [upper]; if your answer is more than [upper], please enter [upper]"
5. Bolded text in questions and answers indicate text that should be emphasized.
6. Different telephone numbers are used for English and Spanish interviews.
7. A list of case IDs are provided to the vendor. The vendor programmed 3 entry attempts for CASEID. If CASEID is entered incorrectly all 3 times, the R/Interviewer can still continue with the interview.
8. IW-INTRO repeats on a loop while the interviewer transfers the call to the respondent. When the respondent is on the line, they press 1 to begin.
